'China Plus One' may evolve, and even as the US and China inch closer to a deal, global companies continue to bet on India's logistics strength, says TCI's Vineet Agarwal.

US President Trump has recently adopted a more favourable stance towards China regarding tariffs; however, India is expected to remain an attractive investment destination due to its large domestic market and manufacturing growth, driven by the production-linked incentive (PLI) scheme, according to Vineet Agarwal, Managing Director, Transport Corporation of India \(TCI\), the country's leading integrated multimodal logistics and supply chain solutions provider. He believes that improving logistics efficiency is crucial for India to compete with countries like Vietnam and Thailand. In a freewheeling interaction with ET Online, he talks about the ongoing tariff war and its impact on the Indian logistics players, festive demand, the outlook for the sector, and more. India's evolving logistics industry presents both challenges and opportunities for operators like Transportation Corporation India. While improvement in the road infrastructure has improved connectivity, enhancing operational capabilities, it has come with financial implications. "The investment has also come at a little bit of a price. Toll costs have gone up substantially in the last few years," Managing Director of TCI Vineet Agarwal told in an interview with Outlook Business.
